TRUE DEMOCRACY IS SAFE!

SOUND MONEY DEMOCRAT. — We may not elect our ticket this time, but we've put the party in shape for 1900.

HE FELT AT HOME.

"I SEE YOU are an attentive observer of modern conditions."
 "I am. I attended a gathering yesterday at which were present the spirits of Julius Cæsar and Socrates."
 "I envy you."

"Last week I witnessed the marriage of a couple who first met each other five thousand years ago."

"I heard about that. Very interesting."

"Very. I am going to New York shortly to have my fortune told. Fortune tellers abound in the metropolis, you know."

"Yes."

"Before long, I propose to travel all over the United States for the purpose of interviewing the large number of miraculous healers in this country."

"And may I ask who you are, sir?"

"Certainly! I'm the Superstition of the Middle Ages."

ABOUT THE SIZE OF IT.

GASSAWAY. — Every ounce of free silver will produce —

GRIMSHAW. — A pound of trouble.

JUST LIKE HER.

HE. — She asked me what color of hair I liked.

SHE. — That's just like Maude; she's always so anxious to please.

A CAMPAIGN SUGGESTION.

I.
 The old method of making a man carry one of these large, heavy banners was little short of inhuman.

ANYBODY PREFERABLE.

TELLER. — I think Levi Pritchett would make a much better Congressman than Colonel Windbagger.

GRIMSHAW. — So do I! So do I! By the way, who the devil is Levi Pritchett?

A PROTEST.

FIRST LOCAL STATESMAN. —

You 're goin' to be fired out of de organization fer not registerin'.

SECOND LOCAL STATESMAN. — Dat's dead wrong! Why can't dey wait an' see if I don't git in me vote?

AN ILLUSTRATION.

JOHNNY. — Papa, what is moral courage?

PAPA. — Moral courage? Well, if a man should confess that he does n't understand the silver question yet, that would be an example of moral courage.

SURPASSED HIS EXPECTATIONS.

"Jones was elected, was n't he?"

"Yes; the result was a very agreeable surprise to him."

"How was that?"

"He received the plurality he predicted."

NOT RECIPROCATED.

"Colonel Gassaway, the politician, is still reiterating that he loves the party."

"Yes; but the party continues to keep at the other end of the sofa and glare."

WITH CERTAIN DISTINGUISHED SENATORS.
 FIRST TRAMP. — What d' yer t'ink of dis here election, anyway?

SECOND TRAMP. — Aw! between dat blanket ballot an' de way de p'leece watch de lodgin'-houses, if t'ings keeps on like dat, we might as well git outer politics!

NOW THE Summer days have passed,

And the Summer Girl 's back in town;

And she waits for the time when the Summer man Will turn up — to turn him down.

II.

Puck suggests the above plan, which is not only humane, but has the advantage of novelty.

MRS. WHEELER (10 p. m.).—Well, I certainly am having a delightful ride this evening! These lonely dark roads have a fascination for me. Let me see—I have twenty miles to go yet. Oh! I'll be home before midnight.

MRS. WHEELER (the next evening).—What! Can't go to the theatre with me? Why, here are the tickets you bought! Go by myself? James Wheeler, do you wish to insult me! Do you think I have no more self-respect than to go to a public place of amusement without an escort? Your instincts are perfectly brutal!

A FICKLE SUITOR.

O NONSENSE worse could a person hear
Than Arthur's thinking himself to be
In love (with him in his thirteenth year!),
But no denial he'll take from me.
Though he's the older by just a bit,
I'm sure he has n't as much of sense
(As even he will at times admit),
Besides I've had an experience.

I met one day, with my sister Nell,
(My oldest sister is Nell), a man,
And in the littlest while he felt
As deep in love as a person can.
And after that, while he seemed, you know,
To call on her, he was wooing me;
And that was just an excuse, as—oh!—
As I was young to receive, you see.

He promised solemnly he would wait
To marry me; and he'd say, like this:
"Now, here 's the lady who sealed my fate."
And how he'd beg for a single kiss!
And candy! Gracious! he bought me more
Than I could eat, and he always said
That study-books were a wretched bore.
He nearly cried when I went to bed.

Now, he most certainly thought that I
Was who he loved,—or why ever tell
Such horrid fibs or the candy buy?—
And yet he went and he married Nell.
And how can I, when a man I've seen
To make mistakes like the one above,
Imagine boys who are not thirteen
Can really know if they're quite in love?

SO NICE!

ETHEL.—Is n't it nice, being able to speak French? Persons can chat in a public conveyance and nobody else will know what is being said.
FRED.—Yes;—not even a Frenchman!

CLUB AS A HOME.

SAIDSO.—We're going to have a cannibal supper at the club to-night.

HERDSO.—What might that be?

SAIDSO.—We are to take in a new member and eat on the initiation fee.

TAKES TIME.

JESS.—This paper tells of a lawyer who took an hour and twelve minutes to ask a question.

BESS.—That's nothing; Jake started six weeks ago to pop one to me.

SHE IS QUITE ATTACHED TO IT.

Her complexion 's like berries and cream,
All rivals it scornfully mocks;
But, alas, for this maiden! 't would seem,
Like the berries, — it comes in a box.

THE DRUMMER WHO WAS N'T A LIAR.

PICTURE a pleasant-faced young man, well-built, neatly dressed, quiet and unassuming, whose general appearance attracted no attention. That usual blasé air of an old traveler, so noticeable in a man young "on the road," was wanting. In fact, he was just the opposite of your idea of what constitutes a drummer.

He attended to his duty in calling upon the trade, and devoted his evenings in the hotel writing rooms sending letters to his people at home. Our young man had commenced his career with the determination always to stick to the truth. In displaying his goods, he always answered questions with perfect candor. After the fatigue of each day he felt that he had accomplished something. Day by day his courage strengthened, and his letters home were long and explanatory.

It was so easy to combine truth with affability, and his conscience was as clear as his order-book. As this was his initial trip, the firm was naturally solicitous, and many letters of advice followed him from the senior member, and many hints and points regarding the peculiarities of many customers were given to help smooth the way. Many of these suggestions our hero deemed unworthy his text, and for some time he debated whether it was not best to state his ideas to the home office. He hastened to do so as the thought rushed to him that he might be deceiving them by an apparent acquiescence in their views. But, strange to relate, they of the office failed to see the application and wrote rather a sharp letter, to his astonishment. He resolved that in spite of apparent short-sightedness he would continue in the way he knew to be right. He concluded they were rather obdurate and were standing in their own light. They knew not the value of a representative that added dignity to commercial lines in general, and to their house in particular. These thorns in his path added to his determination and eloquence, which was embodied in a second epistle to the home office. Full of renewed hope and vigor, one bright morning he came down to the hotel office and asked for his mail. A telegram had just arrived. Could it be possible? Such ingratitude!

"Come home, damned quick! Are you out to sell goods, or on a lecture tour?"

FROM THE HAWVILLE CLARION.

VERY ONCE in awhile, we take our pen in hand and declare for some much-needed reform in the amenities and ethics of life in the community in which we labor. Upon this occasion, we take for our text the abbreviated prefix of "Hon." and demand its abolition. There was a time when "Hon." stood for "honorable," but in its present state of diluted degeneracy it means nothing, not even "honest." Originally, the title was worn with dignity by the few men in the community who were justly entitled to distinction above their fellow-citizens, but now it is appropriated by every man who has no other handle and no claim to one. Every dub holder of a dinky public office, every jack-legged lawyer, every ex-official of any kind, character, or lack of character, every man who rises to address any collection of people for any purpose and upon any occasion, every kind and stripe of politician, every office-seeker, every man who possesses a little more money than his fellows, every stranger of a purse-proud and paunchy appearance, every newspaper man but ourself—in short, any and every Tom, Dick and Harry, who is not already a colonel, a judge, or a professor.

Perverting the beautiful language of the poet a trifle, it is "Hon., Hon." everywhere, and not a plain, untitled citizen to be found outside of the jail and county poor farm. It is time to call a halt, and hereafter the abomination of "Hon." will appear in the columns of this paper no more forever. We have spoken!

NO CRITERION.

SHE.—I think you might stop smoking. You heard me say I did n't like it.

HE.—That's no reason. I heard you say you did n't like to be kissed.

HE HAD CONSIDERED IT.

SHE.—It's a wonder you would n't take a notion to use soap and water.

HE.—I have thought of it, Mum, but there's so many kinds of soap, an' it's so hard to tell which is an' which is not injur'us to the skin that I did n't like to take any risks.

A SUGGESTION FROM THE BACK-YARD.

FIRST CAT.—I see they are going to have another cat show.

SECOND CAT.—Yes; if they'd give a prize for indifference to bootjacks you and I could give them society cats an argument.

AN INEXCUSABLE HALLUCINATION.

KEEPER (lunatic asylum).—This man thinks he is a bicycle.

VISITOR.—Who put him in?

KEEPER.—His relatives. You see, they all ride different makes from the kind he thinks he is.

PLATO.—Let me see. They condemned you to die, but permitted you to choose the manner of your death. Am I right?

SOCRATES.—That's right. I told them hemlock-juice was my poison. I said ice cream first, but they made me guess again.

NEED FOR ACTION.

MRS. BROWN.—We ought to try to have the minister's salary increased. Why, it is n't enough to supply his large family with the necessities of life!

MRS. JONES.—No, indeed! I don't see how they manage to keep their wheels in repair.

MANY A blessing in disguise effectually eludes detection.

"Johnson has got another one of his bright new ideas."
"What is it?"
"To connect with a soda fountain and have surf in your bath-tub at home."

A GOOD MANY men get their opinions ready-made from some one else's measure, and wear them much as they would clothes of the same kind.

HIS VIEW.

JOHNNY.—And in the Millennium there will be no wars at all?
PAPA.—No — except gas wars.

ANOTHER POET SETTLED.

"I have written a poem on the sea," said the poet.
"Very good," said the editor, with a smile; "I 'm going down Saturday; I 'll look at it."

MENTAL TRAINING LACKING.

"The college you have been attending has quite an extensive curriculum I am told."
"Yes, indeed! It is fitted with all the modern apparatus: trapeze, horizontal bars, punching bags, and all, and has an elegant plunge-bath."

ONE WAY OF LOOKING AT IT.

TOURIST (in Oklahoma).—Why is that man, Peter Smith, called "Polecat Pete?"
ALKALI IKE.—Aw! jest outer compliment, I reckon.

SUMMER RESORT LUCK.

The Summer Girl was the only one who had been saved from the wreck.
As she gazed at the dusky faces of the women who surrounded her, she feebly asked, "Where am I?"
"This is No Man's Land," they replied.
"Just my luck!" she gasped, and lapsed into unconsciousness.

IT is a pity that the woman suffrage question can not be settled by transferring to the women who would make a good use of the ballot, the votes of the men who will not.

RARE PRAISE.

THE ANARCHIST PLANK.

A CHAIN is no stronger than its weakest link, and a political platform is no stronger than its rotten planks. If the Popocratic platform had no other rotten plank than the one which declares against "Federal interference" in local affairs, it would still be a thing of menace to life and property. This plank is a virtual defence of the riot, pillage and destruction of property which marked the Chicago labor troubles of 1894, and a rebuke to the President for having used his power to stop it. No upholstery of rhetoric can hide its criminal purpose. In the Summer of 1894 the city of Chicago lay at the mercy of a mob of fire-bugs and rioters. This mob was led by a half-crazed labor agitator who weakly and wickedly incited it to violence. The alarmed people turned naturally to the Governor of their state for protection. They found him not only unwilling to use his constitutional power to suppress the riot, but apparently determined to encourage it to such extent as he dared. Had he been supreme in his power it is probable that his dream of revolution would have come true, and that his unpleasant face would have scowled in malignant glee over a burned and pillaged city. But this anarchist Governor was not supreme. By the terms of the constitution a State has nothing to do with the maintenance of the authority or the execution of the laws of the United States within its territory. And so the President of the United States proceeded to enforce such laws of the United States as were being violated in the State of Illinois. This act anarchist Altgeld might have condoned, but for the fact that in enforcing its own laws the United States incidentally did what he had neglected to do; — it suppressed riot and pillage. The first and most startling result of this "Federal interference" was the howl of baffled rage that came from the throat of this anarchist Governor of Illinois; and never did unbridled rage more conclusively betray the criminal instincts of a man. There were several later results. One was that agitator Debs was sent to jail for his crimes. Another was that both houses of Congress, irrespective of party affiliations, the press of the country, both Democratic and Republican, and the people at large, very warmly commended President Cleveland for the firm stand he had taken in putting down the rebellion at Chicago. No act of his official career has been more needful, more earnestly desired or more generally applauded. But anarchist Altgeld's howl of protest and the frenzied ravings of agitator Debs still survive in a political platform; — not in a Populist platform or a Silver platform, as might have been expected, but in a Democratic platform, to shame every Democrat who has not lost his mind. It is the duty of every Democrat to trace the history of this plank from its beginning; and, above all, he should read Attorney General Harmon's able exposition of the Federal and State laws in question, lately given to the press. He will learn from this that "a Government which is not entirely free to use force to protect and maintain itself in the discharge of its own proper functions is no Government at all;" — and he ought to learn, further, that if he supports the opposite view, he is no Democrat at all, but an anarchist.

A DAZZLING OFFER.

DENISON, Texas, Sept. 10th, 1896.

Editor PUCK — Dear Sir:

If, as you claim, an American silver dollar will be worth only fifty-three cents in case Bryan is elected, will you agree to furnish me ten thousand (10,000) American silver dollars each week for one year at seventy-five cents apiece? Please let me hear from you in your next issue.

Very truly,

E. C. GREYBOURNE.

The trouble with good things like you, Mr. Greybourne, is that they never bear investigation. You offer to put me in the way of making something like $130,000; and yet, so little faith have I come to put in this kind of philanthropy, that I would willingly sell the chance for $1.30. Your letter smells unpleasantly of bluff. Its wording indicates a belief on your part that you have at last found an argument for free silver which no one will dare to answer. You have pictured yourself launching this terrifying proposition at a crowd of gold bugs and seeing them every one slink away abashed. It seems to you to establish once for all the inalienable right of the American people to a fifty-cent dollar — or, it's a seventy-five-cent dollar, is n't it, that you expect?

But to get to business. I will accept your proposition with great pleasure, and trust that we may be able to sign a contract embodying it at an early day. This contract must provide, of course, that your payments shall be made in gold, and I shall also insist upon a gold clause in the bond which you would of course furnish, in the sum of $130,000. Send along this bond and your draft of the contract, and I will do my part toward getting the matter into shape at once.

But why be half-hearted in this matter, Greybourne? You are not helping the cause of silver any. Mr. Bryan is convinced that these silver dollars will be worth 100 cents, and if you believe him you ought to show your faith by offering that sum. You are hurting the cause by betting that the dollar will fall only to 75 cents under free silver, because stealing is stealing whether you take twenty-five cents or fifty.

Assuring you of my belief that you are talking through Mr. Bryan's crown of thorns, I remain,

Incredulously yours,

PUCK.

THE NEW GOSPEL.

MR. BRYAN announces a pound of eight ounces would make us all twice as strong,
And a year of a hundred and fifty days would make life twice as long;
For this is the law of the universe, and the burden of his song,
That it 's only the measure that makes the size — and it gen'rally makes it wrong.

If the little pint bot. were called a quart it would make us twice as full,
If a rusty red were named scarlet, instead, 't would embitter the life of a bull;
With an inch labeled "mile" the lowliest pile would loom with a bulk immense —
Then here 's to the nickel that 's called a dime, and the dollar of fifty cents!

Oh! the people 's bike away shall strike from effete old physical laws, —
Triangular wheels, with a chain that squeals on a frame that is mostly flaws, —
And the tire we sell will continue to swell so long as you choose to inflate,
And we 'll have a law especially for to make it circulate.

Then we 'll have a compass that hustles around and ain't no slave to the pole,
Our thermometer's rise will be double the size for the sake of the saving in coal;
And two will be four, and five will be ten, and a half will be a whole,
When we get the rules of the 'rithmetic well into our own control.

WAL, I'LL SWAN!" ejaculated Josh Medders, stopping his team in front of Farmer Hornbeak's barway and gazing with amazement into the field. "Who have ye got workin' over there?"
"Jay Rubberneck," replied Mr. Hornbeak, coming to the bars and hooking his elbows over the top rail.
"That's who I thought it was, but I could n't hardly believe my eyes. Workin' like a slave, an' right out in the blazin' hot sun, too! This is the first time I ever seen Jay workin' real hard. What are ye payin' him?"

Is a pamphlet of humor issued from the office of the famous PUCK. MR. FREDERICK OPPEN is one of the very few genuinely comic artists in this country, and of this limited number he is probably the funniest. His pictures are funny enough to make a laugh come without the aid of letter-press. These drawings, reprinted from PUCK, form a handsome album of some of the drollest ideas that have flowed from Mr. OPPEN's pencil during the past ten years, and the person who pays thirty cents for the "Book" will easily get his money's worth.—Norristown Herald.

Tours to the South via Pennsylvania Railroad.

Two very attractive early Autumn tours are offered by the Pennsylvania Railroad, leaving New York and Philadelphia September 29 and October 13.

After the experience of the past few years it is hardly necessary to say that these outings are planned with the utmost care; suffice it to say that all arrangements are so adjusted as to afford the best possible means of visiting each place to the best advantage.

The tours each cover a period of ten days, and include the battlefield of Gettysburg, picturesque Blue Mountain, Luray Caverns, Basic City, the Natural Bridge, Grottoes of the Shenandoah, the cities of Richmond and Washington, and Mt. Vernon.

The round-trip rate, including all necessary expenses, is $55 from New York, $53 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other points.

Each tour will be in charge of one of the company's Tourist Agents. He will be assisted by an experienced lady as Chaperon, whose especial charge will be ladies unaccompanied by male escort.

Special trains of parlor cars are provided for the exclusive use of each party, in which the entire round trip from New York is made.

For detailed itinerary apply to Ticket Agents or to Tourist Agent, 1196 Broadway, New York, or Room 411, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

FEARLESS.

"What theory?"

"That the world is growing better. I discovered yesterday that they have stopped putting pictures in cigarette packages."—Washington Star.

OLD COINS AND STAMPS
Are in great demand—rare issues before 1878 bring $1 to $1000. All circulars can be obtained by sending 2 stamps to Numismatic Bank, Dept. P. Boston, Mass.

PEOPLE as a rule do not regard the United States as a wine country, and yet the culture of the grape and the changing of its juice by means of the subtle chemistry of nature is an industry of a very old date on these shores. As early as 1596 the Spaniards made wine at St. Augustine, and the Scuppernon vineyards in eastern North Carolina, where the broad Savannah lands meet the shoal waters of the sounds, antedate the deportation of the clansmen in 1745, when Charles Edward threw for the empire and decidedly lost the game. The seventeenth century California mission made port which left nothing to be desired, and it is well-nigh two generations since Mr. Longfellow hymned the praises of Catawba wine, "which needs no bush, no tavern sign to proclaim it." And the poet was a judge of such matters, and what he did not know about them Tom Appleton could tell him. In fact, for five and forty years champagne, and a very good article of the same, made on the best French system, with carefully-selected grapes and deep cellars for maturing the brut, has been turned out in this State. In west central New York there are a number of rather deep-fissure lakes of the same general type as George and Champlain, and, like them, with a general north and south trend. Some of these lakes, notably Keuka, are bordered by hills of light calcareous soil, such as on the other side of the water produces the best of all grapes; for, curiously enough, to get the most valuable of all crops, you do not need a rich soil—in fact, the invaluable ridge between the Seine and the Loire, where grow the best Bordeaux grapes, looks as barren as Sahara, and the greatest vineyards are as romantic in appearance as a potato field. So, the soil suiting, and the climate being somewhat analogous to that of Champagne, the side-hills of this lake country early became vineyarded, and to-day, although lacking the background of snow-clad peaks, Keuka Lake suggests Lake Leman, with terraced vineyards from water-line to hill-top. The deep cellars of the Old World are here reproduced; even the old and familiar names are present, such, for example, as Rheims, where the Pleasant Valley Wine Company has bored deep caverns in the hillside. The organization is in large, well-provided companies, and the managers show you gold medals from Vienna and Paris. No; it is a great mistake to underrate the United States as a wine country, either for quality or quantity, although it is true that our products are often overbodied, so that in France they are able to work one pipe of California brut wine into two pipes of Bordeaux; but they are sound and pure, and the consumption of them increases steadily, which fact is working much good in the land.

UNWELCOME ARRIVALS.

CHARLEY.—Be gad! Here comes one of the prettiest girls I ever saw in my life. I won't do a thing but flirt with her!

CHARLEY.—I'll turn around and let her catch me. This will make the other fellows die of jealousy.

CHARLEY.—Ah! Good afternoon! You must feel lonely riding alone! No objections to my company? Oh, thanks!

CHARLEY (enraptured, aside).—Oh! is n't she a beauty? Such swell style! Such a handsome get-up, and one of the most expensive wheels I ever saw. I'll bet she is an heiress. The boys down the road will be wild when they see me with her. (Aloud.) Let us go down to the hotel and have some lunch? Oh! thank you for accepting the invitation.

CHARLEY.—Yes; there's the hotel right up there. A swell place. Only the best of society people go there. (Aside.) Those fellows will be crazy jealous, you bet!

CHARLEY.—Now, order anything you wish. (Aside, as the Fairy of the Wheel gives a ten-dollar order.)—Phew! Still, it's worth ten dollars to do these people up. Just look at them! Perfectly dumbfounded. Oh! I'm a corker, I am!

THE FAIRY OF THE WHEEL.—Oh! Mr. What's-your-name, let me thank you for this delightful lunch. No, I can get out myself. You know we have not been introduced, and I had better leave quietly.
CHARLEY (aside).—I wonder what all these people are laughing at, anyway.

CHARLEY (as the Fairy leaves the room).—!?!?!
